

Design for Worldview

We all have unconscious bias.
We are also all creative.
Join us as we facilitate Design for Worldview, a workshop that teaches design thinking and interrupts the shortcuts in our brains that we call implicit bias.

The thesis of Design for Worldview is that we all share an innate creativity, whether we see ourselves as creative or not. We also share innate, unconscious biases that affect how we see the world, how we interact with others, and even how we see ourselves.

As you will find, our creativity cannot erase our bias. But it can and should be leveraged to bring awareness to, and disrupt our biases. Community Design Studio is excited to offer this opportunity to think creatively about both unconscious bias awareness and the design-thinking experience. Consider this your invitation to experience empathy and to translate it into personal action.

WHO

Anyone interested in learning more about unconscious bias and/or the design-thinking process

WHAT

A free, two-hour design-thinking workshop facilitated by Community Design Studio

WHERE

The Winston-Salem Foundation,
Neill Boardroom
751 West Fourth Street
Winston-Salem, NC 27101

WHEN

May 23, 2017 • 6:00–8:00 PM
Light snacks will be provided.

HOW

Sign up on our website.
Visit communitydesignstudio.org/design-for-worldview.html for more information and to sign up.